ABSTRACT

The present invention provides low complexity methods and apparatus for improving the performance of conventional QAM modulations. These methods provide (a) larger noise margins than conventional constellations and/or (b) improved labeling schemes. Additionally, the invention provides fixed-point approximations of these constellations to allow for low complexity VLSI implementations of these schemes.

5

10